An Aboriginal Patient Navigator offers service and support for Aboriginal people and their families living with cancer in the South East region. They are there with you throughout your cancer journey from diagnosis, treatment, recovery to palliative or end-of-life care.

WHO

- Inuit, Metis and First Nations patients, families and their community
- Health care providers delivering culturally informed care

WHAT

- To ensure you understand what you are being told
- To remind you “who is who” in your cancer journey
- To search for options with you, including natural practices or traditional healers

WHERE

- By appointment, in hospital, by phone and when possible, at home

WHEN

- Throughout your cancer journey from diagnosis, treatment, recovery to palliative or end-of-life care
- Decided by you, with your family or caregivers
